

Abstract of the Disclosure

A fuel supply system for reciprocating engines in which predetermined amounts of fuel are injected into the air fuel supply of the engine in timed relation to the reciprocating engine with the amounts of fuel varying in response to speed and load on 5 said engine by varying the stroke of a reciprocating fuel pump in response to the position of a throttle valve.